MONDAY APRIL 20, 1908

The slanderer and the dog poisoner lie down together.

The recent rains are causing spring to put out some fine display advertising.

Now that the candidates are selected, we can go back to business for a little while.

The cool rains came just in time to relieve the overheated politicians who were defeated in the election.

You shouldn't swear that you will never run for office again. Things might look different next year and you might change your mind.

Telling your bachelor friend that your wife always cures your headache by rubbing it away is slight consolation for the b. f.—especially when your wife is absent on her vacation.

Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota, has issued fair notice to William J. Bryan to buckle on his armor, for there is going to be a real fight from now until the convention at Denver is over.

From the reports of volcanic activity that are coming from almost all directions, Mother Earth must be having what the old time southern darky calls "a misery in her innards."

Attorney General Bonaparte says that the evidence against the paper trust is "intangible." What the publishers of the country desire is that the trust itself shall become intangible.

The Prince of Wales is coming to this country just as his father did something like half a century ago. Needn't begin to primp girls, the prince isn't coming after an heiress; he isn't that sort of a man; he belongs to a different breed of pups.

The United States circuit court of appeals set May 7th and 8th as the dates for hearing the appeal of the Standard Oil Company from the decision of Federal Judge Landis fining the trust $29,000,000. Preparations are being made to have an imposing array of legal talent represent the Standard in arguing the case.

A Councilman in Cleveland, Ohio, has introduced an ordinance providing a fine of $50 for any woman wearing a "Merry Widow" hat at a ball game. If the law should be passed it would undoubtedly result in a financial loss to the League managers. A man who would do a trick like that must be a hardened old batchelor.

If the able-bodied unemployed would scatter out into the country away from the railroads and towns, they would soon find plenty of work "to do at fair wages and with plenty of good grub. There is no work along a railroad track except for a section crew. The man who says he can't find work and wont go into the country to look for it doesn't want it very bad.

It seems that nations are just like people after all. Here we have Castro of Venezuela, just like a boy who is afraid he is about to get the worst of it in a fight with another, whimpering that Theodore Roosevelt is trying to pick a quarrel with him, and yelling for some big fellows to interfere. There is a growing suspicion that the other fellows would like to see Castro taught a lesson that will make him behave himself.
